

I am very concerned about Sinclair's decision to air "Stolen Honor" in lieu of regular programming. This is a blatant political act and an inexcusable use of their corporate power in using our public airways for their own private interests. I am seriously sick of all these media mergers and this is a perfect example of where all this leads. Us "average Americans" out here are not unaware of all this manipulation of our media. Many of us are tuning into foreign (BBC) newscasts on a regular basis in an attempt to get different perspective on our country, our government and political activities. There is too much media power being placed in the hands of too few people. We're not stupid out here and increasingly most of us are just tuning out our own nation's broadcasts. I would be saying this same thing if some other corporation decided to show something beneficial to the Kerry campaign in the same manner that Sinclair is doing this. The issue is that they are OUR airways, not the corporations. I am slowly losing all faith in our government to do anything that corporations don't want. I am just fed up with all of our governmental agencies/departments. Thank you. Pat Anderson
